Washington in White House

Washington never more occupied the White House, but it is said that in company with his wife he walked through the rooms only a few days before his death in 1200.

Ancient Chinese Coiled

The honorable guild of toothbrush makers recently held a parade in Canton, China, where it is an ancient and highly respected industry.

Colors in the new coats are varied. In the formal models black is perhaps the most popular. Black, trimmed with white, beige, rose or blue in linings as well as stitchings and contrasting effects is exceedingly popular. Grays and beige also share an important place in appeal, while blues in all shades are much seen. For the daytime, sports, travel or tweed coats an unlimited choice is given. Mixtures are especially smart.

Colleen Moore, who has chosen an exceptionally youthful model in a silk coat unadorned with fur, has used stitching to create an interesting collar. Stitching also finishes the cuffs and bottom of coat. A bunch of violets sewed on one cuff gives a chic touch. Miss Moore wears this coat in her newest film, "Naughty, but Nice."

FORESTS AND GAME

When the Indians roamed North America there was plenty of game, and no matter how thickly they would congregate in one spot there never was a shortage of game or fish. This situation is noticeable in any country that is populated by savages, and despite the fact that they depend almost entirely on the wild animals and fish as their food supply, consuming many times per capita the amount of game that the white man does, there is always a bountiful supply left for the future. The reason for this seems to lie in the fact that the savage does not destroy the home of the wild animals that become his food supply—the forests. He may take fish in large numbers from the streams and yet there is always plenty left because he does not contaminate the waters. He may kill deer and other game in large numbers and yet there are always plenty left because he does not destroy their woodland home. The Indians all wore furs and made their weapons from them, and yet the fur-bearing animals were plentiful until the white man came. The Indian, however, left the forests intact. He set no destructive fires that would destroy the wild life of the region in which he lived. He built no dams to flood the country. He killed only what he needed and left the rest. The main thing, however, in the Indian code of conservation was to leave the forests, the natural breeding grounds of wild game and birds. If the white men will now take steps to preserve what forests are left and to reforest waste areas, wild life will soon be on the increase again. The excuse given for the extinction of certain species of animals and birds that were once plentiful in the United States is that they could not stand civilization. The truth is that they became extinct because the white man violated some law vital to their existence.

REDUCING TAXPAYERS OBLIGATION

News from Manila states that Governor General Wood has announced his intention to sell to the highest bidders all holdings of the government of the islands. The value of the holdings approaches $50,000,000, but the United States will be fortunate if it gets one-tenth of this sum for them.

General Wood has already handed over to the Filipinos entire control of the Manila railroad, in which the government owns a majority of stock. He has had offers from American interests to take over the government holdings in two sugar centrals which have been very lossers. The government will also get out of a cement company in which it is interested.

General Wood is quoted as expressing the belief that the economic atmosphere of the islands will be materially cleared by the new policy and that there will be a revival of business, which in turn will offset the millions of losses sustained through governmental operation and ownership of the railroads and manufacturing enterprises.

The abandonment of government control of business in the Philippines began in 1902 and another attempt on the part of federal authority to engage in commerce, which is and has been a failure, is now being abandoned.

"THE JAY WALKER BLUES"

(By Erwin Greer, President Greer School of Electrical & Automotive Trades, Chicago, Ill.)

Los Angeles "Jay-walker" ordinance—that "fool idea" that couldn't be put over—is going over like a million dollars.

So successful has the city's ordinance against "jay walking" been that officials of other cities are continually asking the Chief of Police how it is done.

The answer is simple, Los Angeles just does it.

When it was first proposed to require pedestrians in the downtown district and at heavy traffic intersections in outlying districts to obey the traffic signals the woods were full of wisecracks who predicted that "it couldn't be done." Even officials in the police department were dubious about the possibility of making such an ordinance stick. But everyone put his shoulder to the wheel, an extensive educational publicity campaign was put on, the curtain finally went up, the orchestra hit the air with "The Jay-Walker Blues" and the show has been a howling success ever since.

There is a world of difference between the way the office and store employees, accustomed to being downtown, obey the signals and the way the infrequent visitor downtown, like the women shoppers, respond. No matter whether engaged in an earnest conversation while hurrying along with a friend the "downtown" man or woman, will stop or go almost instinctively upon hearing the traffic bell ring.

The average woman shopper, however, will plod along like one of the sheep in a herd in the face of traffic bells, sleigh bells, chimes, cow bells, shrill police whistles or whatnot. Alone, in the middle of the crossing, the great awakening comes.

Elderly people are the greatest offenders against the jay-walker ordinance. There appears to be no cure for them.

The women are, by far, greater offenders than the men.

And some women actually defy the traffic officers to stop them. Seldom a man will do that.

Rarely is an arrest made. Only when some offender gets "hard-boiled" about it. The embarrassment of the offender—the feeling must be akin to that experienced when caught out on the street clad only in your underwear—is the best cure. The point is that the great majority of the people are in favor of the ordinance and want to see it enforced. That is what has made its enforcement so successful.

HOW FAKE AUCTIONS GET YOUR MONEY

By W. R. MOREHOUSE

Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

(This is one of a series of articles exposing the wiles of shoppers who are after your money.)

NEARLY everyone is ready "to take a fling" at getting something for nothing or at least for less than it is worth. Because of this many are duped into paying more than regular market prices for things they buy. This class of people is especially susceptible to the appeal of anything resembling an auction. Fake auctions with the cards stacked against the buyer are very common. They rank high among the fraudulent schemes of the country.

The "here today and gone tomorrow" auction fakes rent a fine looking house in some high-class section of the city in which he plans to operate. He furnishes this house with the cheapest imitations of high-class furnishings, with here and there a fine piece which is to serve for bait. Certain pieces are alleged antiques with a thread of glorious history behind them. Of others it is claimed that they have been handed down for generations, originating with some person noted in history or with some famous Southern family. Of other pieces it is maintained that they are made of rare and precious woods imported from far across the sea. The overstuffed furniture, it is claimed, is all high grade of standard manufacture.

Regardless of its superiority and antiquity, the furniture must be sold at once for the owner is compelled to take an extended trip, the family physician having ordered travel and a change of climate as a means of saving his life. Nothing is to be spared and the deep flashings of the auctioneer's axe must go on with no price too low. Individual preservation sales, of course, will be arranged for persons who are unable to attend the auction.

The day of the sale is here. Purchasers are arriving. They are met at the door by the woman member of the outfit—a dramatic person who knows when to shed tears at the thought of having her happy home broken up and her valuable furnishings ings torn from her. She tells her sad story—how she must leave her home and go to distant lands with her husband whose health is broken and life in danger. But she is resigned to her "awful calamity" and will sell all her lovely furniture even at a great sacrifice.

As she directs attention to certain pieces of furniture her voice quavers. She almost sobs aloud as she names the price she is forced to accept. "Less than half the original cost, but price is no object. We must take the train tomorrow," and she wipes a tear from her eye. Fully convinced the sale is genuine, and sympathizing with the unfortunate woman, buyers clamor for the furniture.

But no sooner are the articles transferred from their settings in the slightly darkened rooms of their original owner and displayed in the sunlight of the purchaser's home, than the truth about the sale begins to dawn to the mind of each new owner. Close examination reveals that evidently this wonderful collection of furniture was but odds and ends and unsalable pieces—picked up from second-hand stores by these fly-by-night fakers. Some proves to be the rankest of imitations of the cheapest grade, and the overpriced is so poorly constructed that it squeaks and weaves under the lightest weight.

The Birds Have Flown

When those who have been cheated rush back to the house the next day, instead of making "hot for the fakes,"

BYRD FORCED DOWN IN FRENCH VILLAGE

Aviator and Crew Safe But Machine Lost—Flight to Honolulu.

Le Bourget, France.—Commandant Renvoise of Le Bourget announced that he had received a radio message from Le Havre announcing that Commander Byrd and his transatlantic crew were safe at Vers sur Mer. The report said the plane was smashed in the storm.

The message said the airman made a forced landing within 200 meters of the beach.

The commandant at Le Bourget said he had talked with the telephone operator at Vers sur Mer, who confirmed the report that the fliers were safe.

The telephone connection was bad and the commandant said he could not learn the details.

The sub-prefect of police at Havre also sent a communication stating that the fliers were safe.

Vers sur Mer lies about 135 miles west of Paris, and about 30 miles southwest of Havre.

The aviators were in the air forty-three hours and twenty-one minutes from the time the American took off at Roosevelt field early on the morning of June 26.

Make Honolulu Flight

Honolulu.—Averaging a speed of nearly 100 miles an hour, the army fliers, Lieutenants Lester J. Maitland and Albert Hogenberger, completed their 2,400-mile flight from San Francisco when they brought their triple-engine Lockheed monoplane to a perfect landing at Wheeler field, twenty-five miles from Honolulu.

The flying time of the officers was 25 hours, 31 minutes. It was the first time the Pacific ocean, between the western coast of North America and the Hawaiian Islands had been spanned in an air flight.

New Bureau to Control Colonies of Nation?

Rapid City, S. D.—Creation of a new bureau of government for civil control in the future of all of Uncle Sam's outlying possessions will be recommended by President Coolidge in his message to the next congress.

In the most sweeping change since the United States acquired the insular nations, he plans to direct them of military control by the army and navy, which has been accused of being arbitrary and domineering.

The Philippines, Hawaii, Guam, Virgin Islands and Alaska all would be administered in the future by a single civilian bureau to be lodged in the Department of the Interior, under the proposed plan.

Giant Naval Program Not in Contemplation

Rapid City, S. D.—Reports that the United States will launch a great navy building program as a threat to compel Britain and Japan to accept American terms for naval disarmament were unofficially characterized as without foundation.

President Coolidge will refrain from comment on the Geneva conference last night by him might be construed abroad as in disagreement with the attitude of the American commission, it was said.

Russian Red Terror Goes Merrily on Way

Berlin.—Indiscriminate slaughter of women, children, peasants, sailors, and officers marks the latest outbreak of the Red terror in Russia. Twenty-seven persons were shot in Moscow and nine sailors of the fleet were executed at Kronstadt. To crush the rural unrest 17 peasants in the Pskov region were executed.

Russian Church Head Placed Under Arrest

Berlin.—Metropolitan Sergius, the highest dignitary of the Russian orthodox church, has been arrested by the Cheka, the secret service department of the Soviet Russian government, according to advices reaching Berlin. It is also said that 13 ministers officiating in Ukraine have been deported to Siberia and a convention of clergy called from Armenia has been forbidden.

Canada to Erect Cross in Arlington Cemetery

Washington.—As a tribute to Americans who served in the Canadian forces in the World War, Canada will erect in Arlington National cemetery in a few months a 24-foot memorial cross. The memorial, authorized by the Canadian parliament, will cost $10,000.

Sleeping-Sickness Fatal

Minneapolis, Minn.—Guy Potter, a 62-year-old man, died last night of sleeping sickness after a long illness.

Gets Treasury Post

Rapid City, S. D.—Walter D. Woods of Kansas was appointed registrar of the treasury by President Coolidge.

Japanese Laundry Work

Much of the washing of garments in Japan is done out of doors with plenty of cold water and soap. Cotton garments are hung up on bamboo poles passed through the armpits, and are pulled smooth and straight before they are dried. Silk garments are taken to places before washing, are smoothed out on a long board while wet, then are set up on the board in the sun to dry. Ironing is unnecessary.

Now—A New Race of Motor Cars!

Thanks to

CHRYSLER has just announced a new high compression engine. Undoubtedly other manufacturers will do the same thing. That means a new race of motor cars—swifter—more flexible—more powerful!

Now that Red Crown Ethyl is on the market, high compression engines can be built and operated. Red Crown-Ethyl Gasoline is a high compression fuel.

For years engineers have wanted to build high compression engines. They could not because there was no fuel to feed them. The usual type of gasoline knocks and loses power when compressed beyond certain limits.

Red Crown Ethyl "Knocks Out That Knock".

You'll hardly recognize your old car if you feed it Red Crown Ethyl! Power when you need it—speed when you want it—get-up and go every mile! An engine lively and eager and quick!

Red Crown Ethyl "knocks out that knock"—uses carbon. Carbon deposits raise the compression of your engine. That's why—with old type gasoline—carbon causes knocks. With Red Crown Ethyl it's different. Red Crown Ethyl is a high compression fuel. The more carbon—the higher the compression—the better Red Crown Ethyl works.

This remarkable gasoline gives you the benefits of high compression. That's the scientific reason back of its remarkable performance. That's why hundreds of thousands of motorists in the Middle West will use no other gasoline!

"We Serve Michigan"

What Better Railroad Service Has Meant to Business

Agricultural commodities have shown an upward tendency in prices during the current year, while the course of industrial and raw material prices has taken a downward trend. We have been going through a period of price re-adjustments—always a critical time for business—but, in this instance, there were not the usual accompanying shocks to business peculiar to such periods.

The major reason for this absence of disturbances in business is that smaller inventories are being carried nowadays since the railroad service of the country assures certain and speedy delivery. Traders carry smaller stocks, and business, therefore, is carried on with less capital and with fewer hazards.

More stabilized business conditions are assured American business, and with these, consequently, failures become less likely and less frequent.

What the workings of the Federal Reserve Act proves to be to business, through the stabilizing of credits, the improved steam railroad transportation service is accomplishing through its regular and prompt deliveries. So the large outlays to better the service have justified themselves. Both expedients work to the same end in their respective spheres. They avert the shocks.

In Michigan, this is particularly true. Vast sums, in recent years, have been expended to achieve this new standard of service. Seven of the nine railroads serving Michigan alone are expending this year nearly $26,000,000 in new engines and cars and in improvements and betterments which will continue these stabilizing forces.

These expenditures, too, were made right at home, and at a time when the lull in industry, through which we have just passed, was at its low ebb. Therefore, these $26,000,000, going largely to labor, raw materials and manufactured commodities, served appreciably to buoy up conditions.

Michigan railroads have, therefore, been more than local carriers. They have, through their service, removed some of the hazards inherent in business in former years.

LIFE AND DEATH

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois

YOUNG is twenty-one and has experienced most of the pleasures and has taken advantage of most of the opportunities which present themselves to young men of that age. He has been through high school and is prominent in the activities of his school. He made himself well known in college socially and scholastically, and now he is in business. For some reason he does not seem much in life, however, and he asks himself what it is all about.

"I have tasted about everything there is," he said to me. "There doesn't seem to me much ahead but more of the same thing that I have been going through for the last twenty years or so."

He has not yet gotten interested enough in people and things to find life worth while. It's a pity, but there are a good many more like him. The trouble with Young is that he has not learned how to live, and so he is far from ready to die.

The newspapers a few weeks ago carried the obituary of William F. Kirk who for years had been making people laugh as a newspaper columnist. Just before his death he wrote a little poem, the last stanza of which expresses, crudely possibly, but with a good deal of force Kirk's reaction to the game of life.

"Twas a glorious game from the opening bell,
Good plays, bad plays, and thrills pell-mell.
The speed of it buzzed my years away,
But I thank Great God that he let me play.

Here was a man who found something in life worth while, and who went to his death happy that he had been given a chance to live.

Stanton was one of the most brilliant young fellows I have ever known, logical and balanced in his thinking, indefatigable as a worker, refined in his tastes, and with a brain which seemed equal to any task. His scientific investigations attracted the attention of scholars twice his age and experience. He had opportunity and the greatest possibilities before him. Then at twenty-six he faced death, having only begun to accomplish the things of which he was capable. Having put something into life he had found all sorts of pleasure and profit in it, and he faced death fearlessly.

Knowing that life for him was ended he wrote:

"And have I then loved life too much,
That life should wither at my touch?
The saddest curves of wind-torn grass,
The pines in purple twilight mass,
The sky's soul-soothing endless blue,
The sun's first rays in trembling dew,
The jostling crowd made god of night,
The tang-bared thrill of naked fight,
The pulsing flame that leaps and dies
In women's half-averted eyes,
The sparkling sunlight beaded air,
The mossy-green haunt of maiden hair,
The scent of meadows after rain—
These have I loved with love's own pain."

But life, theackle Jesabel,
Turns cold at being loved too well.

SO MANY ALIASES, FORGOT OWN NAME

Crook Apparently Puzzled for Some Time.

New York.—A criminal of many aliases was being interrogated by detectives. Most crooks are satisfied with one or two, but this particular crook found it convenient to have six or seven fictitious names ready to use. And on different occasions he "had traveled," as the police say, under each of his names. In one city he assumed the name of Jim Jones and in another the name of Tom Smith.

His captors were fairly familiar with his numerous aliases, and the mention of any one of them recalled the picture of a short, thick fellow with a long nose and a pair of small, fishy eyes. A detective had written the aliases on a piece of paper. After studying them a moment he turned to the prisoner and asked gruffly: "Which of these names is your right one?"

The crook examined the list intently and answered puzzled. "Blas't it, I know," he replied with a smile. "You see," he added, apologetically, "I've been travelin' under these here names so long that I've clean forgot my right name. But it will come to me after a bit," and sure enough he soon recalled it. The name, however, was not among the aliases.

Would Like to Forget.

"I think this fellow," said a detective, "was just pretending he did not remember his name. Indeed, he would like to forget it if he could, because he has been tried and convicted under that name for more offenses than he can remember. He is, like most experienced crooks, a masquerader. All crooks are masqueraders, in a sense, and go through life wearing a mask."

"After being initiated into the criminal fraternity the crook resolves to cast aside his own name and take some other one. His main reason for doing this is quite obvious; he desires to conceal his identity as much as possible. Only a fool, he argues, would use his own name in criminal operations."

What a sweet thing it would be for the cops if every criminal used his right name when he went adventuring!

Likewise, he has other reasons for not traveling under his own name. Though he may have fallen from grace, he has qualms about using a family name that heretofore has not been dragged in the mud. He does not care for himself, but he does not want to bring disgrace on his father and mother, who are poor but respectable. Why drag them into his troubles?

"He decides to take a name, and while he is a criminal that name will suffice for his purpose. If he is caught no one will associate John Doe with John Smith. He will be arrested as John Doe, tried as John Doe and, if convicted and sentenced, he will go to the pen as John Doe, and no great harm will be done to anyone except to himself."

Sure to Find Him Out.

"He does not pause to consider that no matter how artfully he may try to conceal his real identity, the police will find him out. They will investigate his past, and when they once become well-versed in his life they will be pretty sure to dig up a lot of knowledge concerning himself and his antecedents."

"After being in the game a while the crook finds that having only one alias is insufficient. He discovers the name he has been using is becoming entirely too familiar—especially to his enemies, the cops. If you are a crook, it does not pay to advertise; accordingly, he assumes another name and lays aside the first alias until people begin to forget it. In time the second alias outlives its purpose and it becomes necessary to take a third name. And this explains why criminals frequently have several aliases."

"All of these aliases he finds useful. It may not be convenient to use the name of Jim Jones in New York, but the name may do very well in another city in which he is unknown. He would prefer, many times, not to have a name at all, but since everybody must follow the custom and have a name, he must have one. Therefore he carries in his head several aliases, any one of which he may assume at a moment's notice. These names mean a lot to him. Some of them recall pleasant memories; others recall scenes that he would much prefer to forget. He remembers what Shakespeare said about calling a rose by any other name and it would smell as sweet. Though he would like to believe this, he knows the cops have a long memory for names. No matter how frequently he changes his name, the cops seem to be able to discover him and drag him from obscurity."

Freak Chickens Subject

of Study by Zoologist Philadelphia.—Chickens with two wings and four legs and even with four wings and four legs, and a duckling equally strangely constituted, were studied by Dr. F. E. Childster, professor of zoology at West Virginia university, who described observations in the American Society of Zoologists meeting here.

The freakish external features of the birds were found to be coupled with odd internal structures. Four kidneys were found in some of the birds, double cloaca in all of them, and frequent variations in some of the digestive tubes. The glands, however, remained single, nor was there any evidence of duplicity in the heart or respiratory apparatus.

Heroic Roman Figure

Cincinnatus was one of the favorite early heroes of the Roman republic. In the year 460 B. C. he was elected consul, the chief executive officer of Rome. Two years later, in time of great national danger, he was chosen dictator or supreme commander to lead the army against the nation of Gauls, or modern France, that was threatening Italy. The messenger sent to tell him of his elevation to the dictatorship found him plowing on his little farm. He put on his toga, the robe of a Roman citizen, to listen to the reading of his commission, and then he went to Rome and took command. He decisively defeated the enemy, and 18 days later he was at home again at work on his farm.

He Wasn't a Bigot

Like Sir James Pears, the Irishman who never forgets a good story that he hears, and later gives it an extra twist of interest through the glow of his own personality, Sir James Taggart, ex-lord provost of Aberdeen, is among the recognized story-tellers of the country. He is telling just now of a certain man of the kirk who was found lying drunk not far from his door by a Roman Catholic priest. The priest picked him up and helped him to his home. As he felt for the latch of his door, the intoxicated one turned to the priest, who was looking down at him. "Oh, ay," he said, "ken ye me?" the Catholic priest, never mind, mon, I'm no' bigotted."—London Sketch.

Holy Oil

The holy anointing oil referred to in the Bible had a base of olive oil and was scented with flowers, myrrh, sweet cinnamon, sweet gum and cassia. These ingredients were probably mixed with the oil in powder form, the mixture then heated until the oil absorbed the odors and allowed to stand until the insoluble matter settled and the oil could be decanted.
